Last year I read Jeremy Donovan's other book, "How to Win the World Championship of Public Speaking", and I won my club's speech contest, only to be bested in the next round. This year, I got this book and I progressed all the way to the District Conference in Tampa, Florida, where I achieved a 2nd place finish. This book has many helpful insights on topic selection, speech organization, and even managing nonverbal delivery. I highly recommend it to anyone who has to speak in front of an audience, and especially to those Toastmasters who aspire to compete at the World Championship of Public Speaking.

Additionally, I can imagine it being an even more incredible resource for anyone looking to compete in public speaking. The book takes nine world-championship-winning speeches and distills their key qualities into a list of simple tips. Just having this book's compilation of funny and inspiring speeches would be enough, but also having Donovan and Avery's insights on how to create your own outstanding speeches makes it a real winner. Donovan and Avery make several references to great speeches by Abraham Lincoln, Martin Luther King Jr., etc., but the one thing that could make this book even better would be for them to dissect famous, non-Toastmaster speeches in their characteristic style.
